Atlantic City Police Department Assists in Apprehension of Wanted Homicide Suspect

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ — The Atlantic City Police Department assisted in the apprehension of Dameon Anderson, 44, who was wanted in connection with a homicide investigation in Philadelphia.

Authorities received intelligence indicating that Anderson was in the Atlantic City area.

On Sunday, June 28, 2026, the Atlantic City Police Department's Tourism District Unit located Anderson and took him into custody on the beach block of Kentucky Avenue in Atlantic City. During the apprehension, a handgun was recovered.

Anderson was being sought by the U.S. Marshals Service on charges including murder and related offenses stemming from a fatal shooting that occurred on April 6, 2026, inside a grocery store located in the 4000 block of Market Street in Philadelphia.

The Atlantic City Police Department worked in coordination with the U.S. Marshals Service New York/New Jersey Regional Fugitive Task Force and other law enforcement partners during this operation.

Questions regarding the investigation, charges, or additional case information should be directed to the U.S. Marshals Service.
